Triple therapy combining two nucleoside reverse transcriptase inhibitors (NRTIs) (zidovudine or tenofovir, and either lamivudine or stavudine) with a protease inhibitor (PI) (nelfinavir or indinavir) is now the preferred first-line regimen for treatment of HIV infection. The major mechanism of action of these NRTIs is to block the de novo pathway of HIV reverse transcription. The development of mutations that cause resistance to NRTIs in HIV requires several mutations to occur within the viral reverse transcriptase (RT) gene, which are highly selected. The most common sites of mutations conferring resistance to NRTIs in vitro are in the active site of the RT, the thymidine 5'-triphosphate binding site, the 70% hydrophobic binding site and the minor binding pocket near the catalytic site. Genotypic testing may be useful to predict response to treatment in the virologically-nonresponder patients.PARIS (Reuters) - French President Emmanuel Macron made the unexpectedly direct push for a ban on the burka and niqab, or full-face veil, that is among the key commitments in his drive for a ban on “anti-French” symbols of Islam. Slideshow (2 images) In his first major speech since his May 7 election win, Macron said on Thursday that “every woman has the right to not wear, a veil” and that this applied to Islamic veils as well as other forms of “concealment”. He said he wants to see a ban on religious symbols at work, school or university, on public transport and at hospitals, which would follow a ruling by the European Court of Human Rights (ECHR). Just hours before he spoke, Macron, who said the worst of his election fears had passed, sent a letter to his three main rivals - far-
